THE TRAIL GROWING COLD

Brooklyn Police Puzzled by the Boschinsky Murders.

Feldman and Lemberg Placed Under Arrest a Second Time.

The police of Brooklyn's Stagg street station were this morning no nearer the solution of the mystery attending the horrible double of the mystery attending the horrible double murder of Mrs. Fredrika Boseninsky and her little son Isaac, than they were when the crime was discovered by her husband, Max, and the clerk of the bottle proprietor, who the persecution to the hotel proprietor, who the centuring was offered by him for the appeal to the heat of the persecution to the saming and select committees.

The hews of the murder spread through that an attempt had been made to bribe the murder spread through that an attempt had been made to bribe the saming and that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the absence of Mr. Vanes only it was learned that in the abs at his home, 35 Moore street, Williamsburg, Tuesday evening.

To addition they will put in the collin with Mrs. Boschinsky a buty's cap, a winte dress and underclotting for her unborn child. The police are now working on the theory that Mrs. Beschinsky was entercaining a lover that Mrs. Beschinkly was enterialning a lover when she was mureared, but are unable to satisfy themselves as to the lover's identity.

The theory is sustained by the statement of Mrs. Y. Yarger, of 30 Moore street, that she saw the shawl and dress hung up at Mrs. Beschinsky's windows as early as 7.45 a.M.

They learned, too, that Mrs. Beschinsky had been in this country less than six menths, that in less than two months she was to nave become a mother and that her husband had not seen her for nearly three years before her arrival in this country.

Mrs. Beschinsky was entered and the term to find a steen the prices to-day, but many stocks sold at the best figures of the year.

The official statement of the St. Paul road for the second week of December, showing earnings of $712,000 against $556,000 last year, was largely responsible for the buoyancy of speculation.

The Quotations years before her arrival in this country,
Mrs. Boschinsky came over in the same ship with Heuben Helfand, of 74 Seigel street, whom she knew well in Poland.
Here was a possible clue, but Helfand proved conclusively that he was at work in Celar street, New York, on the day of the murder, and this apparent clue was necesassive abandoned.

sarily abandoned.

Another possible clue was a number of short, dark brown hairs found clinched in the dead woman's hand.

But they have been examined under the microscope and grove to be her own and not those of her assailant.

LIVES WERE LOST.

Capt. Dexter, of the bark Kentleers, just arrived at this port from London, visited the Maritime Exchange this morning and related a thrilling experience off the mouth of the Whatnes when leaving London for this port in one of the violent gales that recently swept the English Channel and caused the loss of a bark's entire crew.

The Kentigers was at anchor, ready to begin her voyage the next day. Near her was anchored a Russian bark, having on beard a crew of twenty-six men. In the evening the wind, which had been strong, began to increase in vivie ce, and soon developed into a gale. The seas were running high and broke ver the rail, drenching the men on watch Capt. Dexter ordered another anchor let go, as the tempest increased in fury and threatened to drive the vessel upon the rocky beach At midnight there had been no abatement to the gate. Suddenly Capt, Dexter heard a crash, and, running forward, he found that the Russian bark anchored near by had drarged her anchors and was driving down on the Kentigern.

Mrs. Platt was in court and sat beside her mother, who has secomponied her on each day of the trial. Mrs. Platt was becomingly attired in a dress of dark material. This morning she showed signs of nervousiess. Her testimony yesterday was given in a straightforward manner, and evidently made a good impression on the jury. She denied all the allegations of immoral conduct, and pinusibly accounted for her presence at the Long Branch Hotel, where it is alleged she was seen occupying a room with Martin B.
